

What wedding dress should you wear?

Different wedding dress silhouettes help you find your perfect style for your personality, fit the overall mood of your wedding, & best flatters your body on your big day!

Empire

This dress features a fitted bodice and raised waistline with a long, loose-fitting skirt that flows from the waistline down to the hem.

Mermaid

Fitted through the body, this dress flares out below the knee, creating a mermaid-like "tail." This dress can also feature a train of any length.

A-Line

This dress features a fitted bodice through the waist and flares to the ground with an unbroken line (resembling an uppercase "A").

Sheath Gown

This gown features a long, narrow, form-fitting silhouette that falls straight to the floor. It's light and airy, and thought of as "romantic."

Ballgown

Think of the fairytale dresses you see in movies like Cinderella! This dress has a fitted bodice and flairs at the waist with a dramatic, full skirt.

Trumpet

Like the Mermaid dress, the Trumpet dress hugs the body, gradually flaring outward, however, this flare is more gradual and less dramatic.

- ♥ Empire silhouettes will lengthen short legs and are especially flattering to pear shapes.
- ♥ Mermaid silhouettes work best for brides looking to show off their curvy figures. One possible drawback is that a Mermaid dress can make it a little difficult to move around!
- ♥ A-Line silhouettes are ideal for all body types and create the illusion of curves on a smaller frame. They also camouflage a larger lower body.
- ♥ Sheath silhouettes are simple and sophisticated. They look great on petite or slender brides who benefit from its body-skimming shape which lengthens the body!
- ♥ Ballgowns are ideal for most body types, especially pear-shaped figures. However, the full skirt can be overwhelming on a small frame. If you are petite and have your heart set on a ballgown, make sure to have it altered properly to fit your proportions.
- ♥ Trumpet silhouettes work best for those with hourglass frames, small waists, and petites!
